

HOUSE 1881

Welcome to House 1881

Introduction

A modern day classic, it's a place that remembers the past, with a dedication to hospitality and service that reminds one of a time when the bar was set higher. Whether you're looking for an elegant night's stay, or a celebration you'll remember forever, it's a place to celebrate life in heritage, service and style.

About House 1881 and FWD

House 1881 is a unique cultural landmark, the former Hong Kong Marine Police Headquarters. Comprising a boutique hotel and unique dining concepts, this historic site reflects FWD's mission to 'Celebrate Living', providing enriching and interactive experiences. House 1881 offers FWD a unique opportunity to engage with the community in meaningful ways through cultural activities and events, while preserving one of Hong Kong's iconic landmarks.

History

---

House 1881 is where past and present come together. This landmark is one of the oldest surviving colonial buildings in Hong Kong. The building was completed in 1884, where it served as The Marine Police Headquarters for over a century. In 1994, the building completed its service and was declared a monument under the Antiquities and Monuments Ordinance. With this newfound recognition came a new sense of urgency to preserve the history and vitality of the space.

Over the next decades, a full restoration, in accordance with the highest international conservation standards, was completed in 2009 and renamed House 1881.

On the grounds, the stories of yesteryear abound, brought to life with a lovingly reconstructed granite wall and painstakingly restored Victorian architecture.
